Village of Cartersville To Hold Bridge Day Festival On June 1

Appomattox's own "H. T. Nash and the Virginians" headlines the Bluegrass and Country Western music for the "Historic Cartersville Bridge Day" in Cumberland County on Saturday, June 1, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Other major attractions include: tours of a historic tavern, homes, and churches; antique cars; railroadianna; free river ferry rides; Civil War exhibits; gun show and sale; antiques; old mill nearby; historic canal locks; river fishing; country food and drink; and a possible C & O train excursion from Richmond.

Mrs. Julia Perkins of Appomattox will display Confederate money and Mr. Paul Ghioto, historian for our Appomattox Court House Historical park, will be on hand with displays. Mr. Simpson of Madison Hgts., who pleased many folks at our railroad festival with train whistles, will be present, along with the toy makers of Appomattox - Mary and Rich Bartelt.

The bridge at Cartersville survives as the last major timber bridge across the James River. The stone piers and abutments are dated 1823 while the unique framing, use din conjunction with cast iron connections - a rare example of composite construction, was completed in 1884. In 1972, Tropical Storm Agnes destroyed much of the bridge, but the remains have been saved by the Cartersville Bridge Association, and the bridge remains on federal and state historic landmark registers. A new bridge has just been completed by the state highway department, and State Attorney General, Andrew Miller, will be among those at the dedication ceremonies.

Additional historic significance of the area includes: Steuban's crossing of the James River at Carter's Ferry to link up with Lafayette during the campaign of 1781; George Washington's founding of North America's first Canal System - The James River - Kanawha Canal Company - in 1785; "Reverend Dow's curse" upon Cartersville in 1787; Robert E. Lee's regular church attendance in Cartersville after the surrender at Appomattox in 1865; and the 1889 fulfillment of Washington's dream for a western transportation route - not with a waterway but with iron tracks - the C & O railroad along the canal tow path.

You will not want to miss this memorable and historic celebration, sponsored by the Cartersville Bridge Association, in cooperation with Virginia Tech Extension.

Village of Cartersville, in Cumberland County, lies on the James River and Route 45, between Richmond and Lynchburg, and about midway between Interstate 64 and Route 60.
